

Resurrection Buns

You will need:

- Pillsbury Grands (or other large) canned biscuit
- Large marshmallows
- Melted butter
- Sugar
- Cinnamon

1. Have each child flatten a biscuit until it's about 5 inches across. Then they spread melted butter, sugar and cinnamon on it. Explain that the spices represent the spices used to anoint Jesus' body before His burial.
2. Each child gets one large marshmallow. This represents Jesus: it is white because it stands for His purity and His sinless life. Place the marshmallow in the center of the biscuit; then fold the sides around it forming a "tomb." (Help the younger children pinch the sides of their tombs closed – then place them crease-side down on a baking sheet so they won't open while cooking). Put more butter, cinnamon and sugar on the outside. Talk about the sweet taste of the spices and how Jesus gave us the sweetest gift we will ever receive.
3. Bake the buns according to the directions on the biscuit package. Note: they need a little extra cooling time because the marshmallow makes them very hot.
4. When the children bite into their buns, they will be surprised to find the center empty. The marshmallow has melted. As each child discovers the empty tomb, we celebrate that "He is not here; He has risen, just as He said." (Matthew 28:6)
